

Publiseer adds Voxa to its distribution network

Publiseer's distribution channel has just expanded as another new bookstore has joined the distribution network. Voxa, the first Romanian subscription app for e-books and audiobooks, has joined Publiseer's list of distribution partners. Through this partnership, Voxa will be supplied with titles by independent authors from the African continent.

The e-book market in Romania has more than two million readers and is worth over $63m, with an annual growth rate of 7%.

Publiseer is a digital content distribution company that lets independent African writers distribute and monetise their e-books and audiobooks across hundreds of online retailers worldwide. Publiseer also helps its writers protect their creative works from intellectual property theft and illegal distribution. As of writing, Publiseer's services are available to African writers whose works are written in either English or French.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>