

Alfa Romeo Giulia, Abarth 595, Stelvio come out on top in polls

Recent surveys in various automotive magazines asked readers to give their opinion on what they think the best cars are for specific categories. Car manufacturer Alfa Romeo had three of its cars voted as the best.

Readers of Auto, Motor und Sport gave their opinions on what they deemed the best and two Alfa Romeo models came out on top in their respective categories. The Alfa Romeo Giulia was selected as the best 'medium-class imported car' for 2018 and the Alfa Romeo Abarth 595 was named the best 'imported mini car' for 2018.

The Alfa Romeo Stelvio, the brand's first SUV, won the 'New Car of the Year 2018' award after it was placed first in a survey conducted by magazine Quattroruote. The Giulia sports sedan was awarded the 'new car of the year' title in 2017, making it the second consecutive year Alfa Romeo wins the award.

Winning percentage

The Giulia won 22.4% of the votes in its category. The Abarth 595 has been named as the 'best imported mini car' for a third consecutive year and won 'best car' with 27.2% of the votes. The sports car also made it into the first three in the overall mini car rankings. The Stelvio won 34.2% of the votes cast by Quattroruote readers and beat out 12 other models.
