

Demo Plinth displays - simple, yet sophisticated

Issued by Rocket Creative Design & Display 16 Mar 2016

Display solutions need not be ultracomplex nor expensive to deliver the necessary functionality and aesthetics required by brands to promote within retail.

Most certainly, the purpose of display hardware is to attract attention but ultimately the primary function is to deliver the actual product and its key benefits as the hero to influence shoppers at the final point of purchase. A sizeable factor of offering any product to a market is ensuring that a quality product is offered at a competitive price point, with features and benefits to suit the demands.

Richard Nilson, Rocket Creative founder and MD, elaborates, "Rocket Creative design and manufacture an extensive standard range of Demo Plinths in a diverse range of shapes and sizes to fulfill most in-store applications. The modular, hollow core sub-structure design delivers robust structural integrity and has a separate print component. This allows the ur to be rebranded, thereby extending the unit's lifespan and ROI for the client. A further benefit that the units provide is that they can be supplied flat packaged, thereby reducing distribution/courier costs due to their light weight and compact volumetric packaging. This makes a significant impact for large nationwide roll-outs."

The standard Demo Plinths deliver brands ultra-aesthetically. However there are also limitless options available for the customisation for bespoke applications and product-specific display functionality. With a universal application the units ca be used across a host of environments such as in-store retail, mall centre courts for brand activations and at launches, expos, etc.
