

Loeries 2011 opens for entries, categories revised

The Loerie Awards launched its 2011 campaign, Tuesday 15 March 2011, entitled "Don't hate. Create", created by Drafftcb and supported by a mobisite and specially developed augmented reality apps, linking digital technology to the printed media, along with a revamp of its award categories.

Entry deadline and eligibility

The entry deadline for the 33rd Annual Loerie Awards is Friday, 13 May 2011. A 5% early bird discount will be given to entries received by Friday, 15 April. Late entries will be charged a 5% penalty.

The eligibility period for work submitted is 1 June 2010 to 31 May 2011. Entries must be produced within Africa, the Middle East or island states off the African coast (eg. Mauritius, Madagascar and the Seychelles). International crafts may be entered, as long as the person nominated for the award is from the eligible region.

Launch the Augmented Reality app on and use the circular image to see how it feels to be hated.

Hidden messages

The "Trans-Hater" iPhone app, developed by Injozi, uses augmented reality to reveal hidden messages in the campaign posters and print ads when the phone is held up to the image. A special app has also been designed by Pollen and Mail Gloop for use on Mac and PC, "Trans-Hating" hidden messages in the direct mailer.

Category changes

"We've revised the categories from scratch, based on a comprehensive view of the brand communications industry," says Andrew Human, CEO of the Loeries. "Every touchpoint between a brand and its audience is brand communication and our categories are now grouped primarily by media type."

New categories include:

- Tactical Print - special use of newspaper and magazine media, eg. complete, feature or single page, use of margins, page numbers, content within a publication, inserts, catalogues, wraps, bands, etc.
- PR Communication - for the strategic and innovative use of PR to drive coverage of a brand
- Street Pole Advertising - sponsored by AdReach with an award trip to Cannes
- Live Activations - for tactical brand activation using live actors and with an audience that has not been invited, eg. shopping mall activations, roadside, and guerrilla activations.
- Sponsorship - for the innovative sponsorship of consumer focused events.
- Broadcast Design and Graphics - new to the Communication Design category
- Performance Craft - added to the Television, Radio and Live Events categories.
- Architecture has been separated from Interior Design, forming two categories.
- Animation and Special Visual Effects are now two separate crafts.

New rankings

The Loerie Awards now publishes the Official Rankings of the winning brands, agencies, production companies and individuals in the Loeries annual. In 2011, new entries to the credit list are: chief creative officer, strategist, editor, editing company, animator, animation company, VFX operator, post production facility and performer.
