

University of Lagos to benefit from MainOne broadband

A new partnership has been formed between the University of Lagos (UNILAG) and Nigerian telecommunications company, MainOne, which will see the university benefit from high-speed internet bandwidth connectivity on campus.

According to This Day Live, Aderibigbe also explained that 'digital literacy was critical to the improvement of quality of life in today's contemporary world and that MainOne was committed to accelerating connectivity penetration across educational institutions in Nigeria.'
