

TagPay recognised as best technology enabler platform in Africa

Tagattitude, the innovative French FinTech, has won a Kalahari Award for its digital banking platform, TagPay at the 6th Remittance and Mobile Money Expo, held in Lagos, Nigeria.

Yves Eonnet (right), receiving the Kalahari Award

The award recognises TagPay as the best technology enabler platform. With Near Sound Data Transfer Technology at its core, the TagPay platform can turn any mobile device into a payment tool, without changing its hardware or software. Be it a feature phone or a smartphone, the end-client can save, send and spend money freely, right at his fingertips.

Building new financial service ecosystems

Financial service providers use TagPay to offer financial services directly on their clients' mobile phones, thanks to a wide variety of channels, including IVR, the web and sound. With this specific channel, there is no need to depend on the USSD channel controlled by mobile network operators to process mobile transactions.

The TagPay digital banking platform manages all of the transactions that a bank needs: P2P money transfer, salary disbursement, bill payment, and transactions at the point of sale. TagPay also manages the entire branchless banking agent network, making it possible to follow and control all operations in real-time from headquarters.

Yves Eonnet, Tagattitude's CEO, received the award in Lagos, saying that it "was a great honour. The award recognises the impact that TagPay's technology can have in building new financial service ecosystems in Africa. We have built TagPay, bringing the best technology to the table, in order to help financial institutions reach their financial inclusion goals."

Inspiring innovation

The Kalahari Awards were presented at the 6th Remittance and MobileMoneyExpo in Lagos, Nigeria.

Emmanuel Okoegwale, principal associate of Mobile Money Expo, oversaw the awards. “We congratulate of the award winners today and it is our sincere hope that the honour will inspire better innovation in 2016 and beyond,” he said. “MobileMoneyAfrica is proud to be celebrating the 6th Kalahari awards, which celebrates innovative leaders in e-commerce, payments, remittances and mobile financial services.”

The Kalahari awards are dedicated to acknowledging creativity, commitment and excellence in the digital payments and remittance industry across Africa. The awards are given to organisations that have made significant contributions to the remittance and mobile financial services sector by making financial services more affordable and more available, thereby creating impactful developments in Africa.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>