

Facebook can now fact-check news in African languages

Facebook on Wednesday announced a partnership with fact-checking company Africa Check to bring local African language support to its third-party Fact-Checking programme.

 By Shereesa Moodley 16 Aug 2019

Image credit: Simon Steinberger from Pxabay.

The programme analyses the accuracy of news and other information on Facebook, ensuring that users don't absorb or spread misinformation.

ONLINE MEDIA

Facebook Africa launches third-party fact-checking w/ Africa Check, AFP

4 Oct 2018

“We continue to make significant investments in our efforts to fight the spread of false news on our platform whilst building supportive, safe, informed and inclusive communities,” said the company’s Africa public policy head, Kojo Boakye in a statement.

The move will help the social network improve its ability to fact-check information in local African languages:

These languages include Nigeria’s Yoruba and Igbo, Kenya’s Swahili and Senegal’s Wolof.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Reducing fake news during elections in Africa

Akua Gyekye 13 Feb 2019

In South Africa, the social network will fact-check information in Zulu, Sotho, Northern Sotho, Setswana, Southern Ndebele, and Afrikaans.

ABOUT SHEREESA MOODLEY

Shereesa is a passionate writer who often delves into the world of social media, online trends and all things photography. She is also a journalism graduate of Rhodes University and can be found frequenting YouTube and Instagram. She lurks on Twitter too, sometimes.

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>