

Africa, get interactive

Africa Interactive, the online publisher of www.AfricaNews.com and <http://voicesofafrica.africanews.com/>, has a new website.

The organisation now represents more than 230 African journalists, photographers, filmmakers and mobile reporters who work in more than 35 African countries and the network is growing by between two and five new people a day.

The explosive growth, and the apparent demand to participate in the AfricaNews.com website, has made it a focus of our efforts.

www.africanews.com is used as a place for local journalists to share their talent and content with an international audience from 205 countries).

The aim of the new website is to bring this network and capabilities to the forefront. The aim is to work as an organisation to connect the Africa Interactive journalist with organisations and projects who can make use of their services.

Comment on the new website is welcome.