

P.H. fat to open Vodacom In The City

Electronic rap duo P.H. fat has won this year's Open The City competition and will now open Vodacom In The City, alongside the international line-up of Rudimental, MGMT, Crystal Fighters and The Presets.

Thousands of votes came in via SMS and online from music fans eager to see their favourite band on stage. For several weeks, P.H. fat went beat-for-beat against fellow Open The City finalists Bye Beneco, The Plastics and The Kiffness to rally their fans' support in a bid to win. This culminated in the energetic Open The City Session event, in which the finalists had one last chance to sing for their votes.

On 3 October, P.H. fat will take to the Vodacom In The City stage to shake things up with their "homemade" explosive mish-mash rap sound. The fresh and talented duo delivers an incredible live performance that encourages massive crowd participation and will be sure to get fans charged up and ready to party. They are best known for their current hit single, Lights Out, which playlisted on more than 12 radio stations across the country from their most recent 17-track full-length album, Happiness Machines.
