The team collaborated on the site, which launched at the end of December 2019 with independent developer, Vincent Saisset, and local studios Studio Malvah and Okalpha.

“We’re really proud of what we’ve achieved here. We put a lot of work into it, and really wanted to have our work recognised on an international level! To have done it is just amazing,” says Luke Engel, co-founder of MakeReign, “We wanted to showcase and elevate South African digital design on the international stage. Winning another round of these prestigious awards is a move towards achieving that goal.” says Engel.

He continued; “The product is stunning and we needed to showcase the brand through a beautiful, but functional eCommerce site. And I think the work speaks for itself. Massive thanks to all our partners who we collaborated with on this project. Vincent Saisset did a beautiful job on the development, the interactions and transitions on the site are incredibly slick. Studio Malvah expertly led Pantheone’s brand development and skillfully implemented the direction we envisioned for the brand website. Okalpha equally shone with the 3D product renders showcased on the site.”
