Chelsea Alves, a consultant at UNmiss, shares her thoughts on how to leverage AI to get the most out of it effectively. "AI is creating a buzz, and every marketer is eager to take advantage of its powerful capabilities. However, where I see marketers making a mistake is when they dive in too quickly without strategically mapping out and prioritising how to best use AI."
Alves illustrates an example. "Al is most effective when you give it thoughtful prompts. If you want Dall-E to generate an image, don't just describe the image. Go to ChatGPT or Bard and ask it to create a prompt for a specific type of image you have in mind. You can then use that prompt for Dall-E to generate an image that more closely matches your unique needs."
As AI continues to enable businesses to grow, embracing these tips better positions marketers to maximise their investments and take a more strategic approach when evaluating new tools.
Understanding the nuances of AI tools, choosing wisely, and optimising their use can propel marketing-related initiatives, products, and services to new heights.
