

Ecommerce Challenge to gather industry experts, budding entrepreneurs

The inaugural Ecommerce Challenge, hosted by Ecommerce.co.za, is set to take place on 30 June 2021. The one-day online event will see 50 speakers unpack the ins and outs of e-commerce, sharing their lessons and insights on how to navigate online retail in the South African environment.

©Ivan Kruk via 123RF

Designed as a fully online experience, Ecommerce Challenge will include a range of talks and masterclasses on topics like starting an online business, developing a strategy, understanding the market and navigating failure.

There will also be a pitching competition in which business owners can pitch their businesses (and business ideas) to local experts and stand a chance to win their share of R50,000 in prizes.

Migration to digital platforms

According to Dr Alistair Mokoena, country director of Google South Africa, one of the key features of the Covid-19 pandemic is the migration of consumers from traditional to digital platforms. “We’ve seen massive growth in search activity on the Internet, as well as a spike in the monetary value of online transactions,” he says.

“This migration has played into the hands of online and omnichannel businesses. Those that do not have an online presence and those that have not invested in e-commerce capabilities have been found wanting, and their business models are under threat. More and more organisations are starting to accelerate the execution of their digital transformation strategies. For this reason, the time to launch an e-commerce business is now,” Mokoena adds.

Daniel Guasco from Click2Sure weighs in: “E-commerce is still in its infancy stage, which makes this sector a great playground for entrepreneurs to succeed. In the past, business owners needed to sign a lease, build a shop, take a risk. Today, you’re still taking a risk but in the e-commerce environment, it’s just much easier to go to market.”

A watershed moment for e-commerce in SA

Lauren Hartzenberg 18 May 2021

Now's the time to capitalise on e-tail growth

According to Arthur Goldstuck, CEO of World Wide Worx, by 2023, online retail in South Africa will pass 5% of total retail. “This might seem like a small percentage, but it is massive in terms of growth. Just ask any physical retailer what a 5% drop in their turnover would mean for the health of a business. It represents nothing less than a dramatic shift in the nature of South African retail,” he says.

In fact, World Wide Worx's new Online Retail in SA 2021 study shows 66% growth last year, and an expectation of around 40% this year, dropping to 30% next year. Coming off an increasingly high base, these numbers represent similar growth in absolute rand terms, indicating a market growing by more than R10bn a year.

Mokoena, Guasco and Goldstuck all form part of the speaker lineup for the Ecommerce Challenge.

Online retail in SA soars to R30bn, comprising 2.8% of total retail

12 May 2021

Collaboration is key

According to Ecommerce.co.za, for brands and business owners already in the online space, the Ecommerce Challenge presents an opportunity to learn from other sector experts who have experienced successes and failures specific to the e-commerce industry.

Michelle du Plessis, founder of Macaroon Collection and another speaker on the day, comments: “A mentor of mine recently said to me that we learn together. I found that to be such an impactful statement. When we share and collaborate with each other, we create a community around us, which not only teaches us but can serve as sounding boards when we have ideas for our business.”

Local e-commerce sites need to up their game if they hope to retain customer loyalty

Jenni-Ruth Coggin, BMI Research 26 May 2021

“A great e-commerce business is one that creates an experience that you cannot get in a physical context,” says Allon Raiz, founder and CEO of Raizcorp, and one of the judges on the day.

“Ease of selection, additional information before your purchase, ease of payment, a no-questions-asked refund policy, speed to deliver, availability of stock, and frictionless checkout are just a few of the factors making a great e-commerce business. However, as always, ideas are cheap, and execution is everything. I want to understand if the entrepreneurial team can deliver the dream,” Raiz adds.

Hilton Eachus, chief customer officer at DPD Laser Express Logistics, one of the sponsors of the pitching competition, says: “In many parts of the world e-commerce is an important part of the economic and, more specifically, retail activity. Whilst it’s still a fairly emerging market in South Africa, we believe it is and will continue to play an important role in the economy.”

To find out more about Ecommerce Challenge, the pitching competition, or to register for talks, visit www.ecommerce.co.za/challenge.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>