Modern unique architecture complemented by slick décor and a lux bathroom coupled with outstanding views of the Creation Wine vineyards make a stay at Voormanshuis self-catering accommodation a truly special experience.

Situated in the picturesque Hemel-en-Aarde ridge region in Overberg the striking architecture of the chalet, by architect Andrew Finlayson, at once grabs attention with its clean modern lines of wood, steel and brick, yet also blends seamlessly into the backdrop of the flourishing Pinot Noir vineyards and the beautiful Babylonstoren mountain range behind them.

Heavenly vistas and arty decor

Apt to the location there is even a “Stairway to Heaven” in the form of a striking sculpture, of that title, by South African artist, Strijdom van der Merwe, perched quirkily alongside the chalet. While the interior also boasts a collection of complimenting and rotating art works from respected SA artists such as William Kentridge and Kirsten Sims.

William Kentridge

A fun William Kentridge piece even resides in the bathroom, and what a bathroom, an expansive room with breath-taking views from the generous shower and free-standing bath really give this chalet a romantic nod.

The well protected deck also includes a braai area, stocked with wood and comfy lounge chairs for many bird and star watching/ gazing opportunities.

Wine, dine and stay

The award-winning Creation Wines tasting room is only a short walk away making Voormanshuis a perfect sanctuary to come back to after a lengthy wine-fueled pairing.
