

Applications now open for 2020 internship at Boeing

Are you studying, or recently graduated, and aiming for a career in aerospace? Now's your chance, with a fully-paid, six-month opportunity in Boeing's coveted International Business Intern Program (IBIP) in the United States.

Source: @BoeingCEO ©

Launched in 2012, IBIP gives valuable exposure to Boeing's latest advances in business and technology. It offers hands-on experience of a variety of disciplines including finance, project management, strategy and marketing analysis, supply-chain management, and business operations. The program will be based in Seattle in the state of Washington.

"IBIP is a valuable opportunity and a superb bridge to the working world," says J Miguel Santos, managing director for sub-Saharan Africa of Boeing International and director of international sales for Boeing Commercial Airplanes in Africa.

"IBIP helps ensure a robust talent pipeline for the industry and it's a splendid opportunity for the interns to get exposure and experience at the world's largest aerospace company," says Santos.

Minimum requirements

- You must be currently enrolled or have graduated no earlier than 16 January 2019 from a foreign undergraduate or graduate business-related degree program

- Available to work fulltime in Seattle from January 2020 to July 2020
- Business major or proven business experience in business, industrial engineering, accounting, finance, human resources, marketing, strategy, management, information systems, etc.
- Excellent communication and interpersonal skills
- High academic achievement
- Leadership and teamwork skills

Process

- Apply at jobs.boeing.com/job
- Entries close on 6 August 2019
- Candidates will be interviewed in August and September, and the internships start on 17 January 2020.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>