

YouTuber Dan Mace embraces festivities

Dan Mace isn't letting travel bans and his delayed return to New York City mute his festive spirit.

Image supplied

The South African award-winning director and YouTuber has built an audience of close to 800,000 subscribers on the video platform, based on his ability to commercialise his creativity.

His Seeing Sounds series has seen him recreate The Weeknd's Blinding Lights with a physical brick, his ode to Justin Bieber's Peaches was constructed with - you guessed it - actual peaches and now he's rewinding the Festive Season with a remake of Santa Claus is Coming to Town with Checkers Sixty60 motorbikes.

“When I heard Sixty60's drivers were going to be dressed as Santa, I jumped at the opportunity to celebrate these heroes. These drivers have helped us get through all levels of lockdown and next week they're going above and beyond to deliver festive cheer this Christmas,” said Mace.

He continued, “I hope my remake of Santa Claus is Coming to Town, using drivers and Sixty60 motorbikes, puts a smile on the faces of South Africans, who need it most, at the end of another crazy year.”

From 13 December 2021, over 2,000 Checkers Sixty60 drivers will be dressed as Santa, as they deliver groceries and festive joy to customers in 60 minutes.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>