

Duke's Suhana Gordhan named mentor for The One Club Elevate programme

Suhana Gordhan, ECD at Duke has been selected along with other top global women creative leaders to provide mentorship in the second annual The One Club for Creativity's Elevate: Mentorship for Modern Leaders virtual programme.

The programme provides small-group mentorship and networking for mid-level women and non-binary creatives stepping into leadership roles.

Taking place virtually for two hours on three consecutive Fridays - 25 March, 1 April and 8 April 2022 - Elevate includes presentations by top women creative leaders and Q&A, followed by small breakout mentorship groups led by senior creative mentors. A networking directory will enable participants to arrange one-on-one conversations, and they also get access to video recordings of all sessions for later viewing.

“This is a rare opportunity for mid-level women and non-binary creatives to gain invaluable career insights from many of the industry’s top global leaders in a small-group setting,” says Kevin Swanepoel, CEO, The One Club.

“Sessions are a deep dive into important issues that will enhance the leadership skills of participants and help them advance their careers.”

The registration price for all three sessions is $160 for members, $199 for non-members. As the industry's foremost non-profit organisation dedicated to increasing diversity, equity, and inclusion in the creative industry, The One Club is offering Elevate scholarships to BIPOC women and non-binary professionals on a first-come basis. Preference will go to attendees who did not receive a scholarship in 2021.
